No doubt about it, we are seeing some "turbulent" economic times at present. Actually, maybe the word "painful" comes to mind more readily. What has brought on the collapse of some of the once most venerated firms? I certainly am not an expert, but I can tell you about some of our practices, something about our philosophy of service first and profit second, and some things that we haven't done and won't do going forward. I will do a little elementary comparing and contrasting of those practices and philosophy. You can then decide for yourself where to be the most active with your money and moneymanagement strategies.

First let me discuss some salient facts about our financial safety and soundness. In our 73 years, we have accumulated retained earnings (reserves, capital, or equity) of about $80 million. That figure is growing moderately monthly. But to say that it is still growing at all is saying quite a bit these days, isn't it? Growing means we still have a positive bottom line, something that will continue to make the Credit Union a very safe place to save and conduct business. And that is happening, this growing of our capital, without a primary emphasis on profit. What is our first emphasis? Service! Is our focus on service the reason that we're profitable? Again, you can decide that for yourself;

it's a rhetorical comment anyway. Our $80 million of reserves? That's about $35 million or so more than our federal regulator says we need to be well capitalized. Not just adequately capitalized, but well capitalized. That translates to an extremely solid financial position overall.

So, why have some of these other institutions failed or needed a bailout? People in the financial industries have asserted/speculated that it's been due to greed, excessive risk-taking in pursuit of yield (trying to increase net earnings a bit too much), stupidity and/or illegal acts, to name a few. Our unwillingness to face historical realities may also be a contributor. After all, our best indicators of what the future holds lie in the past and irrational people don't want to admit that. Remember the "ancient" history of Enron? Some people say, and a jury agreed, that what their top management did was illegal and deliberate. We won't know for awhile whether or not today's current woes have stemmed from illegal acts; time will tell.

More to the point, what's going on at your Farmers Insurance Group Federal Credit Union? When we take in your share deposits, we immediately seek to find another member, who may need a loan. We get incredibly healthy risk diversification that way. If we have more shares dollars than loan dollars, which we typically do in order to be adequately liquid in cash holdings, etc., we invest that excess not in stocks and bonds of publicly traded firms on Wall Street, not in subprime mortgages, and not in foreign investment schemes. We invest in you, our members, and keep the vast majority of our assets inside the credit union industry.

We have many members with high enough shares and certificates balances that they've surpassed the government and ASI private insurance limits provided by the NCUSIF and ASI respectively. While I always advise our members to do whatever allows them to sleep the best at night, I also will tell you that we are comfortable with you having uninsured funds on deposit with us. Why? Refer back to that $80 million I quoted above.

Please contact me personally should you have any questions about our overall safety and soundness. I will do my best to explain to you how we manage your assets prudently.
